Kids camp went to see Spider-Man 2 yesterday. Here is a review by our very own Robbie Gross.

Spider-Man 2 opened this past weekend with quite a bang. It quickly became one of the fastest movies to reach 100 million dollars. Now I have to warn you I write this review as a huge Spider-Man fan. If you entered my bunk here at camp you would see that I even have a costume hanging up. Putting that to one side I will try to give you all a fair review of the movie. This movie starts off where the other one left off with Peter Parker having has typical bad day with him having to deal with: girl problems, criminals on the street, and not being able to pay the rent. The movie then goes on to explain the very cool new villain Dr. Otto Octavius played by Alfred Molina. The fight scenes between Doc Octopus (which is his new name when he becomes evil) and Spider-Man were better then the fight scenes in the first movie. Also if you are expecting the same movie as the first one just with a different villain then this is not the movie for you. This movie is a lot more like Sam Raimi's earlier films that are silly and campy. Some call the somewhat over done scenes corny but I think it works well with the movie. The end of the movie does becomes a bit crazy with all the different things happening. Even with that craziness I came out of it satisfied that it was probably one of the best movie sequels, if not the best movie I have ever scene, though then again I expected nothing less of a wall crawler movie. But in all seriousness I would recommend this movie to both comic book fans, and non comic book fans alike because it has great effects, wonderful actors, and a fun and adventurous plot line.
